

FCC

I am against this motion. I am currently a VOOM customer and have had the service since its inception. The company has experienced some start up problems that I believe are now fixed. They are providing a unique service that is unprecedented and unmatched when compared to any other media available. The general public needs to have this option of a system that provides the amount of high definition content that VOOM provides. History has shown that no venture like this returns an immediate profit- VOOM needs to be given a chance to survive.

Thanks
